

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy.

There is nothing new or newsworthy about "Stolen Honor." The allegations it contains have all be refuted as being without substance or blatant lying. Presenting them as "news" is a disservice to your audience and a violation of election regulations. It is nothing more than a corporate contribution of free advertising to the Bush Cheney Campaign.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
